

Opportunità

Master e Summer School in Human Development and Food Security

All'Università di Roma Tre

01 dicembre 2017

1. Master Course in Human Development and Food Security 2008/2009
The Master in Human Development and Food Security, University of Roma Tre, is pleased to inform you that the 2008-2009 edition of the Master Course is now open for registration. Again, English will be the working language for the courses, teaching materials and all other activities.

The Master will continue to have duration of 12 months, from November 2008 to October 2009 (9 months of lectures and 3 months devoted to internship or the preparation of a final dissertation).

The Master is mainly built around the acquisition of tools enabling graduates to contribute to fighting hunger and poverty. Hence the master provides strong training in statistics, an up-to-date training in Food Security and Human development in addition to more general courses in Development Economics and Rural Development.

All relevant information regarding the Master (programme, fees, calendar, application deadlines, and students holding a foreign degree) is being sent in a separate email containing the Master Call 2008/2009.

Two scholarships covering the Master's fees will be granted to applicants with outstanding records and who wish to serve as classroom assistants. Candidates interested by these scholarships should complete the application form provided for the pre-enrolment procedure.

For any additional information, please contact this office or visit our web site.

<http://host.uniroma3.it/master/humandevlopment/index.htm>

2. Summer School in Human Development and Food Security 2008

The Faculty of Economics (Federico Caffè) of the University of Roma Tre, within the framework of its Master's programme in Human Development and Food Security offers a Summer School in Human Development and Food Security. The Summer School will take place in Rome, at the University of Roma Tre, from June 23rd to June 28th 2008.

The Summer School in Human Development and Food Security offers a complete overview of the main concepts, definitions and tools required to better understand the problematic of human development and food security and also the actions undertaken by international and national actors for fighting hunger and poverty.

The Summer School is conceived for and open to young professionals including those working in the field, researchers and Ph. D. students.

All relevant information concerning the Summer School (programme, fees, calendar, application deadlines) is being sent in a separate email containing the Summer School Call 2008.

For any additional information, please contact this office.

Links correlati

- ▶  Master HDFS
- ▶  Summer School HDFS